

Jessica Spraggins

Jessica Spraggins is a Health Education Specialist in the Health Communication Branch of CDC's Office on Smoking and Health. She has been with OSH for five years, beginning as an ORISE Fellow and more recently as an FTE. Her work within OSH has focused on both tobacco counter marketing/media use and tobacco cessation. Among her various projects, she serves as the project lead for the Media Campaign Resource Center (MCRC). Prior to her work in tobacco control with the CDC, Ms. Spraggins worked with the American Cancer Society, the Yale Center for Children with Special Health Care Needs, and ran her own daycare center. Ms. Spraggins is a graduate of The George Washington University where she received her BA in Health Science and Yale University, where she received her Masters in Public Health.